Introduction

These materials are provided to assist you in developing an effective board with clear responsibilities. Use these materials as templates or a starting point for your organization, adapting them to the needs of your organization.

Forming an effective board requires the board to have a clear answer to this question: What benefits (or end results) are we providing to whom?

In addition to answering this question, the board needs to establish a single point of administrative authority. This person is responsible for using whatever means are necessary to accomplish these desired ends, within limitations the board should establish in advance. (Examples of limitations are not breaking the law, not treating volunteers, staff or clients inappropriately, or not getting into debt etc.)

The organization will be able to make better decisions more quickly and use the talents of its board members and administrative director if the board:

- Is clear about its role
- Approves procedures for how the board is going to operate and
- Establishes a partnership with the administrative director that so they can take the actions needed to accomplish the intended end results of the organization.

Section 1: Role of the board

A nonprofit organization must, at a minimum, have a board president or chair, vice president or vice chair, secretary, and a treasurer. It is important that most board members are not related to the founder or executive director. A board of less than 15 will be better able to operate as a group and achieve a high level of engagement. Ideally, board members should be people who are interested in governing the organization not in hands-on volunteer activities, and especially, not in a management role. You can involve others in your organization by establishing a resource council rather than having a large board.

Responsibilities of the Board of Directors

Framework

The Board of Directors establishes the framework for the organization.

- Creates and updates the mission and vision statements
- Defines what benefits (or end results) the organization is providing to whom and what it will cost to deliver them?
- Determines how organizational performance will be measured.

Direction

The Board of Directors sets the direction for the organization.

- Sets goals and approves and monitors the strategic or business plan
- Develops organizational policies, including the policies that govern how the board will operate.

Accountability

The Board of Directors is responsible for the behavior and performance of board members and the executive.

- Establishes the code of ethics for the board and ED, including policies related to private inurement and conflict of interest, and sets the tone for organizational behavior.
- Hires and fires the Executive Director/Chief Executive Officer (ED/CEO).
- Establishes the end results the Executive Director is assigned to achieve and defines any limitations on the means the ED can use or any functions the ED must perform.
- Monitors financial and operational performance. Evaluates the executive director based on achievement of the end results and compliance with predefined limitations or requirements.
- Serves as the last court of appeal within the organization.
- Selects an auditor and receives the audit report.

Good Will and Support

The Board of Directors represents the organization to the outside world and provides support and counsel to the executive director

- Supports the organization by making personal donations, garnering resources and advisors and assisting with fundraising.
- Serves as the organization's ambassador to other agencies, funders and potential funders and the general community
- Communicates the value of the organization to prospective donors.
- Attracts donors, supporters, favorable press, and new board members

Clarifying the role of the board and the role of the professional ED

This tool helps board and executive directors or CEOs clarify who has the primary accountability for what organizational activities. The list shown below and the choice in the responsibility column are not necessarily the correct answers for your organization. If, however, the majority of activities are the responsibility of the board you should explore the question of whether you have delegated sufficient authority to the executive director for them to be effective in leading the organization. Executive directors who must consult with the board on most management decisions may not be able to move the organization forward and respond to opportunities or threats.

Clear authority makes the organization more agile

If a responsibility belongs to the executive director, the board should discuss if the executive director should bring information about that function to the board, in what form and frequency. Unless directed by the executive director, the board should avoid gathering information about the organization or setting up relationships with staff members other than the executive director, since this will compromise the management structure of the organization.

Directions

As a group, go through the list of activities and add any major activities undertaken by the board or major activities that are carried out by the ED. Then go through and define who is primarily responsible for each activity. You can use the tools as it is with answers supplied in the responsibility column or use a blank column which opens up the discussion further.

This tool is a vehicle for exploring the assumptions of all members of the board and setting out clearly those activities for which the ED has primary responsibility. Limit shared responsibility to only those few activities that must be shared. Having the lead responsibility for something does not rule out information sharing, monitoring of performance, or consultation between board and ED.

Board Self Assessment

501 Commons consultants frequently use a version of the attached self-assessment survey, as well as interviews, when working with boards. The intent of the survey is to determine how satisfied board members are with board processes and how individual members and the board as a whole can be most effective in supporting the organization.

A board assessment process can help board members:

- Reflect on their experience.
- Explore how comfortable, enjoyable, and meaningful participation on the board is to the board member
- Understand individual expectations for preparation time, how the meetings are run, and how decisions are made.
- Identify different perceptions and opinions among board members about the board's role.
- Identify and remove obstacles to increased board effectiveness.

The survey, while brief, points to issues that need board discussion and clarification. Generally, when 501 Commons is involved with an organization's board or advisory board, 501 Commons tabulates all the responses so that the results and comments from the surveys and the interviews will be reported, but not attributed to an individual. Board members and staff only see the compiled results. Because it is helpful if people are very frank in their responses this level of confidentiality may increase the candor of the answers.

What you need to consider

- Do you want to use a survey tool for board self-assessment?
- Would like to have the results handled confidentially? If this is the case, we will recruit a 501 Commons volunteer who will collect and tabulate the results and report back to us at a future meeting.
- Are the topics areas and questions on the attached survey appropriate and relevant for your board? What is missing?

Do:

- Take seriously your responsibility to ensure the future leadership of your organization.
- Make recruitment a regular, on-going activity of the whole board.
- Seek the counsel and involvement of your key development staff in all recruitment activities.
- Ensure that the board conducts a self-evaluation, and reviews and updates the by-laws and board manual annually.
- Ensure that board policies (e.g., Conflict of Interest) are in place, up-to-date, and that you have insurance for Directors and Officers.
- Be frank, honest, and positive about the challenges facing the organization.
- Adhere to the recruitment standards and selection criteria established by the board.
- Treat each board candidate as if they were a major gift prospect or donor. You'll never go wrong!
- Develop a personalized cultivation plan for each board candidate.
- Leave yourself and the candidate a gracious "out."
- Document recruitment activity and make it a permanent part of the candidate's donor or prospect file.
- Review the service of each board member annually and have a leadership plan in place for each.
- Remember to renew terms for current board members at the annual meeting.

Don't:

- Hurry up and ask, or wait until a crisis drives recruitment activity.
- Settle for less than who you really need and want.
- Misrepresent or sweep organizational challenges under the rug: they may be just the things to "hook" a board candidate.
- Ask the candidate prematurely.
- Ask in such a way that the candidate is a new board member: your work is just beginning.
- Think recruitment is a staff activity or responsibility.
- Recruit outside the board for officer positions!

Section 3: Board Policies

Board policies provide guidance to the executive or to the current and future boards about how important activities are handled by the board or the executive. Written policies help the board do its work more effectively, spending less time on process and discussion of redundant issues. Having written policies is also likely to help you attract high quality board members who expect the board to have defined how it does it work, how it evaluates the ED, and how risks such as conflicts of interest are handled in the organization.

Congress has asked the IRS to assume a monitoring role over the governance practices of nonprofits. The IRS now asked nonprofits to disclose whether they have several specific policies in place when they file their 990 tax forms.

We recommend you keep your bylaws to be very short and include elements that rarely change about the organization and the board structure. All the specifics about how the board does its work should be included in board operating policies. These policies will help new board members orient quickly to the board and help the board function more effectively.

Sample Board Policies for Questions Asked on the IRS 990 Forms

These policies can be used as the basis for developing your policies in each area the IRS asks about on the nonprofit tax forms (990's.)

- Conflicts of interest
- Document Retention Policy and Procedures
- Whistleblowers Policies and Procedures
- Private inurement

Donors may look at the organization's answers to these questions as an indicator of how organized and attentive the board of the organization is to its duties. While the policies and, in some cases, the forms that board members fill out are quite lengthy, these policies provide you with a thorough process and procedure for ensuring that the organization's policies conform to the IRS expectations.

Conflict of Interest

Intent

Conflict of interest arises whenever the personal or professional interests of a board member, the executive director, or other management staff are potentially at odds with the best interests of the organization.

Potential conflicts are common. For example, a board member performs professional services for an organization, or proposes that a relative or friend be considered for a staff position. Such transactions are perfectly acceptable if they benefit the organization and if the board made the decisions in an objective and informed manner. Even if they do not meet these standards, such transactions are usually not illegal. They are, however, vulnerable to legal challenges and public misunderstanding.

Loss of public confidence and a damaged reputation are the most likely results of a poorly managed conflict of interest. Because public confidence is important to [Name of Organization] the organization should avoid even the appearance of impropriety.

[Name of Organization] has taken the following steps:

- Language regarding conflict of interest is included in the Board Members' Code of Conduct, which limits business transactions with board members, the executive director and management staff and requires a process for disclosure of potential conflicts. The policy requires board members to abstain from decisions that present a potential conflict.
- The organization has a disclosure procedure that a board member, the executive director, or a consultant/volunteer may utilize to disclose any issue that may constitute a potential conflict of interest.
- The organization has a process for deciding whether a potential conflict is, in fact, a conflict.

- The executive director will establish procedures, such as program policies, competitive bids, and formal hiring practices, which ensure that the organization is acting without any conflicts of interest.

Conflict of Interest Disclosure Procedures

I. Application of Policy

This policy is intended to supplement, but not replace, federal and state laws governing conflicts of interest applicable to nonprofit corporations. It applies to board members, the executive director, and management staff, as well as their relatives and associates, and to who are hereinafter referred to as "interested parties."

II. Definition of Conflict of Interest

A conflict of interest may exist when the interests or concerns of an interested party may be seen as competing with the interests or concerns of [Name of Organization]. The variety of situations that raise conflict of interest concerns include, but are not limited to, the following:

A. Financial Interests - A conflict may exist where an interested party directly or indirectly benefits or profits as a result of a decision, policy or transaction made by [Name of Organization]. Examples include situations where:

- [Name of Organization] contracts to purchase/lease goods, services, or property from an interested party.
- [Name of Organization] offers employment to an interested party, other than a person who is already employed by [Name of Organization].
- An interested party uses their relationship with an [Name of Organization] client to obtain employment, a contract or other benefit.
- An interested party is provided use of the facilities, property, or services of [Name of Organization] in a manner that would not be available to other community members.
- [Name of Organization] adopts a policy that specifically creates a financial benefit to an interested party.

A financial interest is not necessarily a conflict of interest. A conflict of interest exists only when the board decides that a person with a financial interest has a conflict of interest.

B. Other Interests - A conflict also may exist where an interested party obtains a non-financial benefit or advantage that he/she would not have obtained absent his/her relationship with [Name of Organization]. Examples include where:

- An interested party seeks to make use of confidential information obtained from [Name of Organization] or an [Name of Organization] client for his/her own benefit (not necessarily financial).
- [Name of Organization] adopts a policy that provides a significant nonfinancial benefit to an interested party.

A conflict of interest exists only when the Board of Directors decides there is a conflict.

III. Disclosure of Potential Conflicts of Interest

An interested party is under a continuing obligation to disclose any potential conflict of interest as soon as it is known or reasonably should be known.

- Board members and the executive director complete an Affirmation of Compliance form (Appendix B) when they join the board or staff and annually thereafter.
- Any interested party completes the Disclosure of Potential Conflict of Interest Statement (Appendix A) to disclose any potential conflicts of interest.

Disclosure Statements and Affirmations of Compliance will be submitted as follows:

- For board members, the disclosure statements will be provided to the board chair.
- The chair's disclosure statement shall be provided to the secretary of the board.
- In the case of staff and consultants/volunteers, the disclosure statements shall be provided to the executive director.
- In the case of the executive director, the disclosure statement shall be provided to the chair of the board.

The secretary of the board or the person designated by the board as the reviewing official is responsible for bringing potential conflicts to the attention of the board or the executive director. The secretary of the board shall file copies of all disclosure statements with the official corporate records of [Name of Organization].

IV. Procedures for Review of Potential Conflicts

Whenever there is reason to believe that a potential conflict of interest exists between [Name of Organization] and a board member or the executive director, the board shall determine the appropriate response. The designated reviewing official has a responsibility to bring a potential conflict of interest to the attention of the board for action at the next regular meeting of the board or during a special meeting called specifically to review the potential conflict of interest. [Name of Organization] shall refrain from acting until such time as the proposed action, policy or transaction has been approved by the disinterested members of the board.

Whenever there is reason to believe that a potential conflict of interest exists between [Name of Organization] and a consultant/volunteer, the executive director shall determine the appropriate response. The executive director shall report to the board chair the results of any review and the action taken. The chair shall determine whether any further board review or action is required.

V. Procedures for Addressing Conflicts of Interest

The following procedures shall apply:

- An interested party who has a potential conflict of interest with respect to a proposed action, policy or transaction of the corporation shall not participate in any way in, or be present during, the deliberations and decision-making vote of [Name of Organization]. However, the interested party shall have an opportunity to provide factual information about the proposed conflict and/or action, policy or transaction. Also, the board may request that the interested party be available to answer questions.
- The disinterested members of the board may approve the proposed action, policy or transaction upon finding that it is in the best interests of [Name of Organization]. The board shall consider whether the terms of the proposed action, transaction or policy are fair and reasonable to [Name of Organization] and whether it would be possible, with reasonable effort, to find a more advantageous arrangement with a disinterested party.
- Approval by the disinterested members of the board shall be by vote of a majority of directors in attendance at a meeting at which a quorum is present. An interested party shall not be counted for purposes of determining whether a quorum is present, or for purposes of determining what constitutes a majority vote of directors in attendance.
- The minutes of the meeting shall reflect that the conflict disclosure was made to the board, the vote taken and, where applicable, the abstention from voting and participation by the interested party. Whenever possible, the minutes should frame the decision of the board in such a way to provide guidance for consideration of future conflict of interest situations.

VI. Violations of Conflict of Interest Policy

If the board or executive director (for consultants/volunteers) has reason to believe that an interested party has failed to disclose a potential conflict of interest, it shall inform the person of the basis for such belief and allow the person an opportunity to explain the alleged failure to disclose.

If the board or executive director (for consultant/volunteers) decides that the interested party has in fact failed to disclose a possible conflict of interest, the board shall take such disciplinary and corrective action as the board shall determine.

Private Inurement Policy

Introduction

Non-profit charitable, religious, and educational organizations obtain their tax-exempt status under the theory that they perform valuable services for society and lessen the burdens of government. If a tax-exempt organization allows its money or other property to be used for private rather than public gain (i.e., for "private inurement" or "private benefit"), then it risks losing its exemption. In addition, under recently adopted "intermediate sanctions" provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, "disqualified persons" such as CEOs, CFOs, board members, major donors doing work for the exempt organization, etc., who receive "excess benefits" are subject to an excise tax ranging from 25% to 200%, depending on the circumstances. Furthermore, any organizational manager who knowingly facilitates such an excess benefit is subject to a 10% tax.

What is Private Inurement or Private Benefit?

"Private inurement" is the payment or diversion of an exempt organization's assets to its officers, directors, employees, relatives, friends, major donors, or others in a special relationship to the organization who can influence or control the policy or the day-to-day activities of the organization for less than full and adequate consideration.

Private inurement also extends to the use of organizational assets for "private benefits" such as sales, leasing, construction contracts, service transactions, etc., at other than fair market value or the exploitation of the exempt organization for the benefit of a private business (e.g., "sweetheart deals," promotional schemes, and/or giveaways to private individuals or businesses).

Policy:

The purpose of this private inurements policy is to ensure that [Name of Organization] is fulfilling its responsibilities to act as a competent and trustworthy steward of its resources and is behaving in a way that is consistent with the following IRS requirement:

A section 501(c)(3) organization must not be organized or operated for the benefit of private interests, such as the creator or the creator's family, shareholders of the organization, other designated individuals, or persons controlled directly or indirectly by such private interests. No part of the net earnings of a section 501(c)(3) organization may inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual. A private shareholder or individual is a person having a personal and private interest in the activities of the organization.

To avoid the conferment of material private inurements or benefits in the types of transactions described above, the organization will enter into transactions solely to benefit the charitable purposes of the organization, rather than for a private party's benefit. The organization will exercise due diligence to ensure that any proposed transaction is fair and reasonable. This means that the organization could not have obtained a more advantageous arrangement with reasonable effort.

The organization will ensure that the intent of this policy is carried out by:

- Screening proposed transactions through the applicable boards, advisory boards, and committees, and other processes set out in the organization's procedures
- Taking care that organizational policies and procedures pertaining to the signing of contracts are followed. (For example, the board may require contracts in excess of a certain amount or duration to be executed by the board rather than the executive director.)
- Putting in place additional procedures that may apply in connection with contract bids for building construction, renovation and repair projects.
